

People Finder Databases

Westlaw gives you access to the most comprehensive and current collection of public records available online. People Finder databases contain information on individual persons compiled from numerous public sources, including telephone directories, publishers' mailing lists, change of address files, real estate filings, utility records, public demographic and consumer household data, voter registration records, driver's license data, federal and state death records, and credit header data.

Required search terms vary by database, as does the type of information contained in a particular record. Most People Finder databases can be searched with easy-to-use search templates. Many offer the Terms and Connectors search method as well.

The Tabbed Locator Page

The tabbed Locator page provides easy access to Westlaw resources for locating people and related search tools, such as the Locate a Person shortcut and the Find a Person Wizard. In addition to the Locator page, which concentrates on resources related to litigation, a Public Records tabbed page, which includes links to all public records sources, and a tabbed People Information page, which includes links to public records, company information, and news sources, are also available.

Selecting the Right Database

The People Finder database that is right for your search depends on the information you know (e.g., name, telephone number, or Social Security number) and the information you want to retrieve (e.g., current address, previous addresses, or date of death). Use the chart on the following pages to select the database best suited for your search. The chart is divided into four parts:

- Searching with a Person's Name or Address
- Searching with a Person's Telephone Number
- Searching with a Person's Social Security Number
- Searching Combined People Finder Databases
