LIBRARY'S NAME OFFERS EASY ACCESS TO BROAD, DEEP RESOURCES FROM CAMPUS RESEARCH.

Library's name has expanded its collection of online news, business and legal resources with the recent addition of Campus Research™.

Available via campus network's name, Campus Research has a simple, intuitive user interface designed specifically for college and university research, according to spokesman's name, spokesman's title.

Most students and faculty will be able to use Campus Research effectively without extensive training or library staff assistance. They'll find a wealth of current and archived information for almost every course, and it's all available 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

Campus Research is powered by Westlaw® and organizes its resources under two tabs: News & Information and Law. Both are searchable with plain-English queries or Boolean Terms and Connectors.

- Click on the News & Information Tab for The New York Times, Business Week, thousands of other U.S. and international newspapers, magazines, newsletters, industry and trade publications, company data, newswires and broadcast transcripts. More than 30 topical categories simplify searching for a particular course or field of study.
- Click on the Law Tab for legal encyclopedias; full-text federal and state court decisions, statutes and administrative materials; Harvard Law Review and 600-plus other law reviews and journals; and expertly authored treatises. Many of the resources include background, explanations, finding aids and research references by attorney-editors at West, the country's premier legal publisher.

Students and faculty do not need a special password for Campus Research. They can use the service in the library, dormitory, classroom or anywhere they have access to the campus network.

To start using Campus Research, simply brief instructions here. For more information, please contact Contact name and phone/e-mail/address.
